

HOW INCOME AND RACE AFFECT CALIFORNIANS' HEALTH AND WELLNESS

86%

of upper-income Californians rate their community as a

"healthy place to live"

as compared to just

53%

of low-income residents.

73%

of upper-income Californians rate their community as a

"safe place to live, free of crime"

as compared to just 40%

of low-income residents.

More than 80%

of California's low-income residents are people of color.

73%

of white Californians rate their community as a

"healthy place to live"

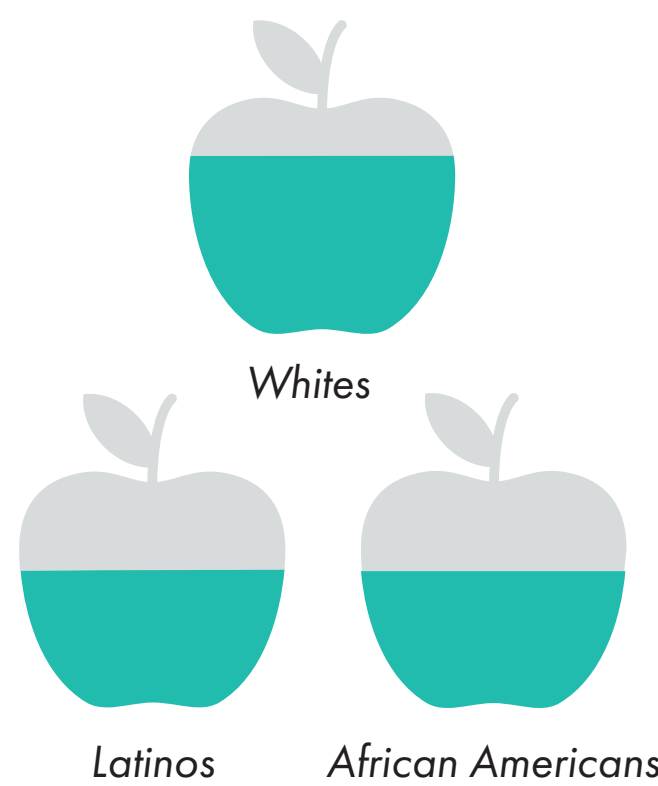

compared to just

59%

of Latinos and

58%

of African Americans

Whites

73%

of white Californians rate their community as a

"safe place to live, free of crime"

compared to just

Latinos

African Americans

47%

of Latinos and 45%

of African Americans

53%

of white residents live in

"a good place to get a job"

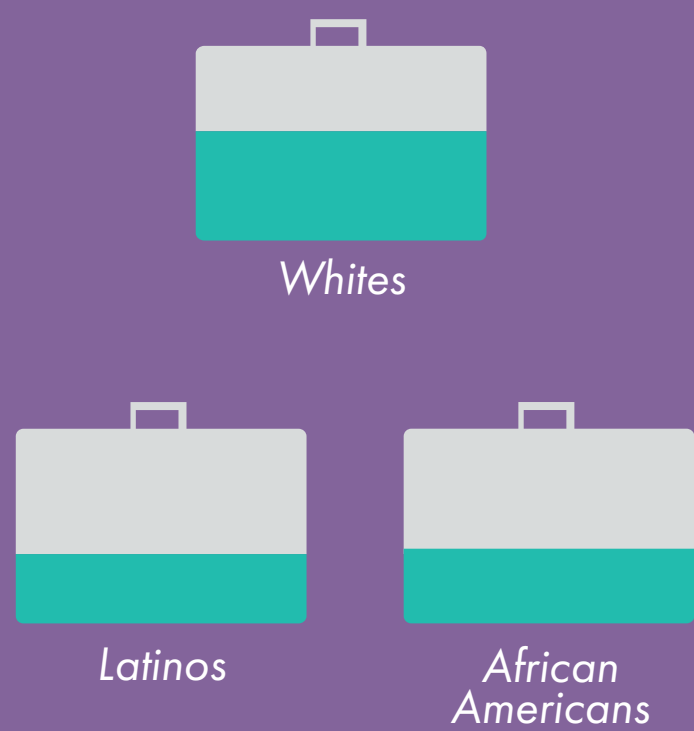

compared to just

35%

of Latinos and 38%

of African Americans

8 in 10

Latinos and African Americans say the following community groups should play a major role in addressing health inequities.

LOCAL K-12 SCHOOLS

HEALTH CARE PROVIDERS

LOCAL HEALTH DEPARTMENT

LOCAL ELECTED OFFICIALS

LOCAL POLICE